Bio:

At young age he was already interested with Country Music. Robert got my first guitar when he was about four years old. At young age he heard music of John Denver, Waylon, Don Williams and Haggard. At one day his father asked him if he wanted to sing on a real stage. He approved, and there he stood. On the big stage, on the local carnival festival in our village, dressed up as a cowboy in front of 200 people. His first live performance with the legendary John Denver song, "Country Roads". When he was about sixteen years old they started a band with a couple of friends called "Penthouse the next generation". After a period of jamming and gigging he was in the Army for almost 6 years. He had his guitars and amp on the army base where he taught some of his buddies in the platoon how to play the guitar. When Robert went out of the army he started experimenting with Country Music by recording a bunch of demo's to see what he could do best with his voice. And finally that's how he created his repertoire with songs that he can proudly present to ya'll...
